Deskripsi Singkat MK	This course aims to give students a coherent understanding of various theoretical and critical tools used to interpret texts by introducing them to strategies of close reading and to larger discussions regarding textual analysis. Although the course will not necessarily encompass the entire history of literary and cultural criticism, it will examine a range of schools and methods. These schools and methods will be grounded historically and will be situated and contextualized within larger critical conversations that have developed over time

This is a short, sharp critical engagement with one or more texts covered in class: an academic paper in the standard form, ones own critical points of view, bold of argument, and shined, prose wise, to a glistening polish. Prompts will be provided, but you are encouraged to break from them to compose your own questions and topics; Open book, open notes, no Googling. The mid-term is just that: a temperature-taking of your work so far, assessing your capacity to engage imaginatively and substantively with the material to this point. 2 X 50		0%
